

Philosophy

My philosophy as an early childhood educator is for children to be motivated to learn by having opportunities to play in a hands-on environment that is enriching, stimulating, and safe to explore. This makes their everyday school experiences positive ones.

In order to help the children become caring and active members of society I think it is important for children to believe in themselves and know that they are a part of the world community.

Children should enjoy learning and discovering new things, as well as practicing appropriate social skills of how to be a good friend and person overall.
